

Japanese geological environment for geological disposal

Kinichiro Kusunose [1]

[1] Geological Survey of Japan

JNC has been collecting a wide variety of geological data to make up a technical basis for HLW geological disposal under the geological environments of the Japanese Islands. This paper reviews the proposed models to be used for an evaluation of capability of geological disposal in Japan. A wide range of basic geoscientific studies are necessary to increase reliability and acceptability of the geological disposal.