Measurements of induced currents flown in the neutral lines of power system

Masahiro Seto [1], Kenji Murayama [1], Yasuo Kitamura [1]

In order to investigate an underground electrical structure in and around Miyagi Prefecture, the induced currents are measured by using the neutral lines of power system at three substations. Spatial characteristics of induced currents are obtained.

In order to investigate an underground electrical structure in and around Miyagi Prefecture, the induced currents are measured by using the neutral lines of power system at three substations. Spatial characteristics of induced currents are obtained.