

Ion distributions in the near-earth magnetosphere

Hisato Shirai [1], Toshifumi Mukai [2], Yoshifumi Saito [2], Kiyoshi Maezawa [3], Susumu Kokubun [4]

[1] Oyama Natl. Col. of Tech., [2] ISAS, [3] Dept of Physics, Nagoya Univ, [4] STEL, Nagoya Univ.

We have analyzed the data obtained by some satellites (AKEBONO, GEOTAIL, DMSP, etc.) at three different altitudes. We find some characteristic structures in the ion distributions observed by AKEBONO and attempt to identify them in the data obtained by the other satellites. Their positions in the magnetosphere are discussed in detail.

We have analyzed the data obtained by some satellites (AKEBONO, GEOTAIL, DMSP, etc.) at three different altitudes. We find some characteristic structures in the ion distributions observed by AKEBONO and attempt to identify them in the data obtained by the other satellites. Their positions in the magnetosphere are discussed in detail.