

3D simulation of near-field strong ground motion based on dynamic modeling

Takashi Miyatake [1]

[1] ERI, Univ. of Tokyo

It is well known that the fault normal motion is predominant in near field ground velocity or ground acceleration. However, in some condition of rupture process and location, the fault parallel motion could be predominant. The present paper demonstrates this fact using 3D simulation.