

A study of earth science education at universities

Noriko Sugi[1]

[1] Kyoritsu Women's Univ.

Through a report on earth science education at our university, how earth science is accepted by female students has been studied. They are interested in natural phenomena near themselves, and especially they hope to get a basic knowledge about chemistry, biology and earth science. It is important to give opportunities for learning natural science to young women who will bring up the next generation both in home and society.