

New technique to separate stresses from heterogeneous fault-slip data

Atsushi Yamaji[1]

[1] Div. Earth Planet. Sci., Kyoto Univ.

<http://www.kueps.kyoto-u.ac.jp/~yamaji/>

New technique is presented for the separation of stresses from heterogeneous fault-slip data. Comparing the multiple inverse method (MIM), an existing technique for the same purpose, the present method spends much less time of computation but has less resolution than MIM. It is difficult to process hundreds of data through MIM. In this case, the present technique takes the place of MIM.

New technique is presented for the separation of stresses from heterogeneous fault-slip data. Comparing the multiple inverse method (MIM), an existing technique for the same purpose, the present method spends much less time of computation but has less resolution than MIM. It is difficult to process hundreds of data through MIM. In this case, the present technique takes the place of MIM.