

Developed equivalent channel model with the consideration of water viscosity change by pore size

Tetsuro Hirono[1], Weiren Lin[2], Satoru Nakashima[3], Manabu Takahashi[4]

[1] Interactive Research Center for Sci., TIT, [2] Research Center for Deep Geological Environments, AIST, [3] Interactive Research Center, Tokyo Inst. Technol., [4] GSJ

We developed the equivalent channel model with the consideration of the change of water viscosity by pore size. The highly constrained structures of hydrogen-bonded water molecules in restricted pore spaces is suggested by the infrared measurements of thin film water. It is necessary to consider the structural change of water molecule, that is viscosity change for the permeability estimation in dense rocks.