

Seismological studies of fault zone structure -A review and future prospect-

Kin'ya Nishigami[1]

[1] Disas. Prev. Res. Inst., Kyoto Univ.

<http://gemini.rcep.dpri.kyoto-u.ac.jp/~rcep/nishigami/>

I will briefly review the studies of fault zone structure from seismological approaches.

Recently fault-zone trapped waves have been observed at several fault regions in the US and Japan, and fault-zone trapped waves are considered to be effective ways to reveal the fault-zone structure.