

J072-P001

Time: May 28 17:15-18:45

soil erosion, nutrient loads, nutrient uptakes by plants at a burned slope

Nana Matsuda[1], Shinichi Onodera[2], Tomohiro Naruoka[3], Naoyuki Nishimune[4]

[1] Biosphere Sci., Hiroshima Univ, [2] Integrated Sci., Hiroshima Univ, [3] Graduate School of Biosphere Sciences, Hiroshima University, [4] Biosphere Sci., Hiroshima Univ.

Soil erosion, nutrient loads, nutrient uptakes by plants were monitored at a burned slope. The experimental slope is located in Setoda island, Hiroshima prefecture. The area of 63ha around the slope was burned in Aug. 2000.