

A study on awareness of university students about environmental problems

Noriko Sugi[1]

[1] Kyoritsu Women's Univ.

We human beings have disrupted global environment, so we have to improve it for ourselves and for other life on the earth. It is especially important for the young generation to recognize that environmental destruction is a serious problem of our time.

As for our university, students have general information of environmental problems, such as global warming, depletion of ozone layer and acid rain, and they know the method to improve it at a certain degree. But they have not realized lives ideal for global environment yet.

By examining data of awareness of students, we discuss here how university students view environmental problems and how they act to make them better.