

Crustal Movements in Kinki District for the Last 30 years

Kunihiro Shigetomi[1]; Fumio Ohya[2]; Kensuke Onoue[3]; Wataru Morii[4]; Kajuro Nakamura[5]; Yoshinobu Hosono[6]; Yasuo Wada[7]

[1] RCEP, DPRI, Kyoto Univ; [2] RCEP,DPRI,Kyoto Univ; [3] Research Center for Earthquake Prediction,Kyoto Univ; [4] RCEP, DPRI, Kyoto-Univ.; [5] DPRI,Kyoto Univ.; [6] RCEP, DPRI, Kyoto Univ.; [7] Disa. Prev. Res. Inst., Kyoto Univ.

Disaster prevention research institute, Kyoto university, has been carried out continuous observations of crustal movements at many observatories in Kinki district for more than 30 years. We separated the observed trend of the movements into the common change to the area where the observation network has been spread and peculiar changes to each observatory. The analyses revealed common secular changes in crustal deformation to the whole district.