

Study of long-term stability of groundwater chemistry based on oxygen and carbon isotopes in carbonate minerals

Mizuno Takashi[1]; Katsuhiko Hama[1]

[1] JAEA

This study aims to understand the long-term stability of groundwater chemistry. For the purpose, oxygen and carbon isotopic ratio in zoning calcite grains were measured. Analysis results indicated that groundwater chemistry had changed hydrothermal fluid, fresh water, seawater and fresh water, in that order.