

G122-010

Room: 202

Time: May 20 14:30-14:45

The microboudin method as a new palaeopiezometer

Nozomi Kimura[1]; Tomoya Miyake[2]; Atsushi Okamoto[3]; toshiaki masuda[4]

[1] AIST; [2] Inst. Geos., Shizuoka Univ.; [3] Tohoku Univ.; [4] Inst. Geosci., Shizuoka Univ.

The microboudin method, a new palaeopiezometer, is recently established by the author's achievements. The present study summarized the advantages and disadvantages of the microboudin method through the comparison to the other existing palaeopiezometers such as recrystallized grain size, dislocation density.