

Groundwater around a Tame-ike (irrigation pond)

Sachihiko Taguchi[1]; Kazutaka Nakamura[1]

[1] Earth System Science, Fukuoka Univ.

Isotopic analysis of groundwater around Tame-ike (irrigation pond) is one of the most useful methods to evaluate their origin and fluid flow, because the water of Tame-ike is often suffered by evaporation, and resulted in heavy composition isotopically.