

EUV astronomy by Kaguya

Ichiro Yoshikawa[1]; Ichiro Yoshikawa SELENE UPI Team[2]

[1] Univ. of Tokyo; [2] -

The spectral range in the extreme ultraviolet was thought until recently to be useless to astronomy, primary because the opacity of the interstellar medium has been found to be markedly inhomogeneous in both density and ionization state and the sun is fortunately located in a region of low extreme ultraviolet opacity.