Decline of farm labor force and farmland, depopulation, and increasing of the aging society are serious problems in rural areas. And, green tourism using vacant fields for regional activation and exchange program with urban area could be dominant for the solution. This study focuses on a case of Taniguchi village of Kaneyama town in Yamagata prefecture, for understanding regional activation program. The actual condition analysis of the revitalization with four different issues, which are utilizing regional resources, local community, exchange program with urban areas, and local leadership would be the major part in this study.
