Highly sensitive barometers optimized for dense array observations are required to facilitate infrasound observation, noise reduction in gravity measurements and other geoscience applications.

The authors have been working on the R&D of such barometer, by using an optical fiber transducer. The concept and R&D status of the work will be presented.

Keywords: sensitive barometer, optical fiber transducer