

Social Response of Local Government during Catastrophic Tsunami Disaster

Yoshihiro Okumura^{1*}

¹Graduate School of Global Environment Studies, Kyoto University

In this study, a standard social response of local governments during a tsunami disaster is discussed by using basic disaster prevention plan of Japan. And possibility and limit of governmental response is found in terms of characteristics of a catastrophic tsunami disaster in the case of the great East Japan Earthquake Disaster.

Keywords: tsunami disaster, local government, catastrophic disaster, disaster reduction education