

Leaning from and toward fathering

Takashi Gomi^{1*}

¹Tokyo University of Agriculture and Technology

This presentation will give you brief outline of my experiences with two small daughters (6 and 3 yrs old). Both father and mother of the two kids work in forestry areas and focus on field work. Since father's working locations is near the home, the father (myself) tends to take care the kids more frequently than the mother. Throughout the life, we have many opportunities for learning various aspects related to natural sciences and education at universities. This presentation will provide our experiences and reflection for the field work of fathering.