

Diverse formation mechanisms of exoplanetary systems revealed by observations

Norio Narita^{1*}

¹National Astronomical Observatory of Japan, ²NAOJ Fellow

Recent astronomical observations have revealed that there are diverse exoplanetary systems in the universe. In this talk, I will review the following two points, (1) what types of exoplanetary systems have been actually discovered, and (2) how can such diverse planetary systems form?

Keywords: Exoplanets